Debra B. Taylor,
Senior Associate

"I hired Debra as a Career Coach shortly after being laid off from 18 years of continuous work in the television advertising business. Debra helped me to channel my energies and focus myself in my job searching activities. She provided me with multiple tools, resources, and exercises designed to help me be successful in exploring new career paths in a focused, methodical way. Along the way, I discovered a lot of things about myself, and what I want from my next career path position. Reinventing one's career at mid-life is never easy, but Debra helped me discover my assets in order to give me the confidence to embrace my new future."

Debra Taylor is a coach and consultant who works with leaders, new managers, and parents to move past limitations to design careers and lives they truly love. As a certified career life coach, parent, and former hospital administrator, Debra has the expertise and experience to support clients in identifying their unique value, clarifying career development goals, resolving communication and relationship issues, and achieving results through concrete, realistic action steps. Her style is gentle but firm, empowering clients to take charge of their own personal and career fulfillment while enjoying the discovery process.

Debra has extensive experience in business coaching, strategic planning, facilitation, program development, and organizational development during a period of rapid change and fiscal constraints. She draws on nearly 18 years of management experience at teaching and community hospitals in the greater Boston area, including Mount Auburn Hospital, Beth Israel Medical Center, Brigham and Women's Hospital, Leonard Morse Hospital, and the Boston Veteran's Association Medical Center. Debra attained the designation of Certified Professional Coactive Coach (CPCC) by completing the rigorous certification program of the Coaches Training Institute. She then took advanced training in relationship systems coaching and became certified by the Center for Third Age Leadership to deliver coaching programs on midlife career fulfillment. Debra earned a master's degree in Health Administration (MHA) from Duke University and a bachelor's degree in Psychology from Bates College. She is a member of the International Coach Federation.
